The Property of Signor Massimo Colizzi.

171A AN ETRUSCAN COUCH, the wooden parts are restored, but the bone ones are antique; it consists of four legs, each $8\frac{1}{2}$ in. high, veneered with polished bone, the shapes of which imitate turned work, and a number of ornamental fittings made of carved and polished bone; the smaller fittings, set in the restoration round the edge of the seat, are discs and curled leaves of two kinds; through the leaves there once passed an ornamental cord, or some kind of hook, for the attachment of valances; there are also eight acanthus sprays, here set below the edge of the seat. At each corner of the couch is a winged genius, 4 in. high, in high relief, of vigorous and expressive workmanship, who stands, hand on hip, carrying a cornucopieae; a slot at the back of each of these figures was for some attachment. The pillow-rests, edged with a beading, end below in medallion-busts (four in all) of Artemis with quiver at her shoulder, and above in boldly executed heads of griffins (also four), $2\frac{3}{4}$ in. high. The couch seems to have been made expressly for a tomb: the genii bear some reference to death and immortality, while both Artemis and the griffins are sometimes used with sepulchral significance. Similar examples of ancient Etruscan furniture are a funerary couch from Orvieto in Chicago, Ransome, Studies in Ancient Furniture, pls. XX-XXVI; and another, from Norcia itself, published by Pasqui in Monumenti Antichi I, 1899. Portions of others are also known, but complete examples are rare, and the frames have always perished. Probably of the 2nd Cent. B.C.; found in a tomb at Norcia, not far from Perugia. [Pl. III].

The Property of Signor C. Bernabo.

- 171B A GOLD-MOUNTED SWORD AND SHEATH, entirely without restorations, 31 in. long. The cylindrical hilt is of polished bone capped by a golden pommel on which are engraved bands of geometric pattern; the guard is horse-shoe-shaped; it is of gold, has geometric designs engraved upon it, and is clasped to the blade with two bronze rivets, once plated with gold; the mouth of the scabbard and perhaps also the plates of the scabbard itself, which are of bronze, were also once plated with gold, as are the rings of bronze wire by which it was suspended. The scabbard has its edges bound with a heavy strip of gold fastened with golden pins, some of which are missing, and is encircled with two bands of gold, one below the mouth, into which the suspension-rings are stapled, the other where it begins to taper towards the point, both bands are adorned with geometric patterns in graffito and fastened with golden pins; the golden chape of the scabbard repeats the motive of the guard, it is covered with finely hatched geometric patterns and terminates in a ferrule of gold, bound four times with golden wire, and engraved at the bottom with circles. The bronze blade of the sword itself, which is in good preservation, can be seen in places through the scabbard; the weapon belongs to the Early Iron Age, and is not later than the 8th Cent. B.C.; this is one of the finest examples known: see Montelius, "Civilisation primitive en Italie," pl. 31, no. 7, p. 174 f. and Naue, "Die vorrömischen Schwerter," pls XXII ff. Found at Lugo, near Bologna, in Italy; this district was one of the chief centres of Villanovan culture. A unique piece, the extreme richness of which is equalled by its archaeological importance [Pl. IV].
